Mulheres do Brasil (Women of Brazil) is a full-length feature film that brilliantly mixes fiction and documentary. It constructs an overview of the spirit of Brazilian women through the personal stories of five protagonists. The narratives explore a range of universal female types that are enlivened by the experiences of these extraordinary characters.

The film was screened earlier this year as part of the 2006 Brazilian Film Festival in Miami, where it won the Audience Award and the Award for Best Sound.

In Portuguese with English subtitles.
106 minutes.
